my cat loves this game. Watch out! When buying this game as the♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥worship is real. Anything with a♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥is OP.

. Great graphics, plays really well. Three classes and coop is amazing with additional content. It feels like a 2 man raid when you do coop. All around, a very fun game and well worth the price.. This masterpeice really nails the head into the hammer when it comes to game desine.. I don't even know if my children would like to play this.

Clumsy controls

Unskippable and boring cutscenes. cons:

no free transform tool

no skew tool

no lasso selection tool

no polyline selection tool

no real vector shaping tools - you cannot select vector line/shape, because there are no such thing, don't even know, what 'vector tools' really means because there are no vector tools at all. (the only vector related feature, that you can export to svg).

no quickzoom shortcuts like space+ctrl,

no shape tools.

. Took me 53min to solve all levels.

It's a really nice game and for that price it's recommendable!

Just have fun :D. Stupid. I wish I had listened to the reviews and kept my dollar.

bla bla bla bla its a game!If you try and pick appart things in video games IDC how great the game is your always going to find something to ♥♥♥♥♥♥ about!!So to all those people who write reviews as if they are getting paid to be a game tester lighten up!this is by far one of the most fun rts games I have had the plusure of playing in a long time,so enjoy it if not then buy it pick it apart and be misirable LMAO!!!!!! This game is absolutely ridiculous and very funny. Awesome characters, cute design, a bit racist, and everything in between. I definitely recommend buying the DLC, you won't regret it.

As someone who cares less about politics than how to properly clean a porta-potty, this game is entertaining and does it's job.. Got it for 10 cents...

6 minutes for me to finish the game, but I kinda enjoyed it...

More levels would be nice.. This game looked cool from the screenshots. Broken camera, terrible physics. Absolutely horrible music. The 3D models are generic and the gameplay has no point. It also claims in the steam icon to be 'the world's most cpu dependent game'. Completely untrue and irrelevant. This is shovelware. It's just kind of upsetting that there are actually enough 'positive' ratings to say that it isn't terrible.

When you first start up the game you have two options. >Start game, and > . The second option pops up a dialog that says 'missing executable.' The first brings up the window "Fall Setting Dialog" that has very broken english. "Self Collapse(May become the cause that very slow)" and "keep the fps forcibly(May become the cause that looks poor)". The music in the main title sequence sounds like it came straight out of a 90's romantic sitcom. When you start playing one of the three game modes, you jump and fall down an endless tunnel, occasionally hitting things. The controls only give you some small command over your character, but not enough to be meaningful.

Terrible game. Really really dissappointed.. i, dont, really, understand, the, point, to, this, game. This game is a massive step back from previous games. It feels as if they decided that what would make the game better would be to remove most of what made the previous games good and keep all the bad. I won't bore you with repeating what everyone is saying about the shameful graphics, textures, game-play, quests, etc.. It is basically all true even after all the patches.

Even the little things, like immersion, were completely disregarded in this games. For example, in JC3 in order to access the supply drop menu, skills, map, etc, Rico would pull out a tablet in-game to view these things. However, in JC4 they removed this and replaced it with what amounts to little more than a glorified options menu. This is just one of many decisions they made which completely ruin the immersion.

Sorry, but there is no just cause for buying this game.. This game is amazing for how cheap it is, but the only issue is how ♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥ly impossible it is to run pipes to your houses. Then at night some weird martian♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥come in to steal your house while your defense turrets kill your eardrums. I had like 8 and it still wasn't enough to stop them from taking my damn house. Next, you have to fix your pipelines because the hologram of the house before you place it doesn't show the little boxes that pipes have to connect to for the house to function properly. I would definitely recommend this to anyone with an extra dollar.. I will not deny that there are a lot of things that are not perfect about Healer's Quest. I played on Hard, and I almost never had to change 3 of the 4 spells I used. Some of the translation is a bit wonky and the grammar is sometimes off (creator is French.) The achievements require a ton of pointlessly grinding for gold, which I personally find irritating. There are too many random battles that end up becoming wack-a-mole. Navigating around the map was slow and annoying enough at the end that I decided to just finish the game instead of get 100% completion.

But beneath all that is a REALLY enjoyable game. This game oozes more heart than any game I have ever played. The humor is, more or less, totally spot-on, through the entire game. This game frequently breaks the 4th wall, but manages to do it in a way that it is somehow funny every time, because while the characters are aware they are in a video game, they are totally serious about the importance of the video game. And the often self-deprecating nature of the references manages to keep it fresh (for example, at one point there is a blank painting on the wall, and the wizard says it's because the lazy dev forgot to finish all the art assets.) This may be the second funniest game I've ever played (after Charles Barkely Shut Up and Jam! Gaiden.) My favorite: There is a bow named the Lawyer's Bow whose description is "You must read the EULA at healersquestgame.com/eula to use the Lawyer's Bow." This is an actual website, with an EULA, where buried in the fine print you realize when you use the Bow you lose half your gold.

The boss battles are frequently challenging puzzles. They are surprisingly varied, and you feel a real sense of enjoyment upon beating them.

The game is exactly the right length, and you know it the entire time, because the characters reference that they are in the mid-game and end-game, so the gameplay never ends up getting stale or feeling like it overstays its welcome.

The art style is adorable and lively. It makes the game feel like a story book.

When I backed this game on Kickstarter I was expecting a gimmick. What I got was a fully fleshed out real actual game. I can see why it took Pablo so long to finish it, it is obvious that he put MANY hours into developing it, tweaking it, going back and changing things to see what worked. If you are looking for a high-budget AAA release with 100+ hours of gameplay, this game is not for you. If you want a real piece of actual art, made with heart and soul, I can't recommend this game enough.. Go Home Dinosaur is a Kid Friendly Casual Tower Defence game that is pretty polished. It's fun, and have a good concept of towers having shapes, which make levels kind of a puzzle for the best form/result ratio. If you want some good fun for 5 hours, pick it up! The 60 levels took me around 5 hours to complete.
